

Delhi Teachers University, in collaboration with the Indira Gandhi National Centre for the Arts (IGNCA), organized a special screening of the nationally and internationally acclaimed short film 'Selfie Please' at the IGNCA's Samvet Auditorium. The film portrays the story of a family where the elder sister has Down Syndrome, leading the younger sister to feel neglected, believing that their mother gives more attention to the elder sibling. The film's writer and director, Anu Singh Chaudhary, has presented this sensitive theme with great emotional depth.

At the conclusion of the program, Anurag Punetha, Head of IGNCA's Media Centre, delivered the vote of thanks, stating that the film not only sensitizes us as human beings but also educates us.

Following the screening, a special discussion was held on the theme 'The Myth of a Normal Family'. The panel featured film writer-director Anu Singh Chaudhary, actress Sarika Singh, Malavika Joshi, and iCANthink founder Deepa Garwa, who all shared their insights. The discussion was moderated by Dr. Sanjeev Rai, Registrar of Delhi Teachers University, with a thematic introduction presented by Sahar Baig. This was followed by a Q&A session, during which the panelists answered audience questions related to the film.

The audience found both the film's message and the subsequent discussion to be highly relevant and inspiring. This event marks a meaningful initiative in the fields of art and education, offering a fresh perspective on family, society, and personal identity.
