The Vice-President of India, Shri C. P. Radhakrishnan today extended his warm greetings and best wishes on the momentous occasion of the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh's (RSS) centenary. In a social media post, the Vice-President said that as the world's foremost patriotic organization completes 100 years, its greatest contribution remains its man-making ethos—creating self-disciplined, responsible citizens essential for a strong and vibrant society.

He noted that since its founding by Dr. Keshav Baliram Hedgewar Ji in 1925, the RSS has inspired generations of youth to build strong inner character and to voluntarily serve society. Shri Radhakrishnan observed that, guided by the motto Seva Parmo Dharmah, RSS volunteers have always stood at the forefront during floods, famines, earthquakes, or any other calamity—serving the needy selflessly, without expectation or awaiting instructions. This spirit of service, he said, is a unique and invaluable gift to the nation.

The Vice-President emphasized that the RSS embraces all without distinction of religion, caste, or language, truly embodying the spirit of unity in diversity. He remarked that this inclusive approach has made the RSS and its affiliated organizations enduringly successful in driving the all-round progress of our great nation.

He further expressed confidence that the day is not far when Bharat will rise as the supreme nation of the world. In this great journey, the role of the RSS is significant, and it will continue to endure and succeed with time. The Vice-President conveyed his best wishes for the RSS's continued service to society and for carrying forward its noble mission of national unity, harmony, and progress.

On the momentous occasion of the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh's (RSS) centenary, I extend my warm greetings and best wishes. As the world's foremost patriotic organization completes 100 years, its greatest contribution remains the man-making ethos — creating self-disciplined,...
