The Minister of State for Women and Child Development, Smt. Savitri Thakur will visit New York to lead the Indian delegation at the 64th Session of the United Nations Commission for Social Development (CSocD) at the UN Headquarters.

The Commission for Social Development, a functional commission of the UN Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC), focuses on advancing international cooperation on social development issues, including social inclusion, equity, and welfare-oriented policies. The annual session provides a global platform for Member States to review progress, share experiences, and exchange best practices.

India's participation in the 64th session reflects its continued engagement with multilateral efforts on social development and its commitment to constructive dialogue on global social policy priorities. The visit will also provide an opportunity for interaction with UN agencies and representatives of other Member States on matters related to social development.
