Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi today shared an article by Union Minister Shri Dharmendra Pradhan highlighting the transformative impact of the Pradhan Mantri Ujjwala Yojana in empowering women and ensuring clean cooking energy.

The Prime Minister noted that the article outlines a major shift, where women are no longer seen merely as beneficiaries of policy, but as its starting point.

The Prime Minister posted on X:

"Union Minister Shri @dpradhanbjp writes that the Pradhan Mantri Ujjwala Yojana marks a major shift, where women are not seen as beneficiaries of policy, but as its starting point.

The programme expanded LPG coverage and enabled targeted subsidy transfer reaching over 10 crore women. The transition to clean cooking has reduced household air pollution and improved well-being. The focus now is on sustained use, affordability and ensuring energy justice.

Do read this insightful article!"
