EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Regulations)

These Regulations allow individuals, such as company directors, to apply to the registrar of companies to protect certain personal information from being made available for public inspection on the register.

Part 2 makes provision as to what information individuals can require to be protected and what an application must include.

Part 3 amends the Companies (Disclosure of Address) Regulations 2009 (S.I. 2009/214). The amendments expand the grounds on which an individual can apply to require the registrar to refrain from disclosing their address to a credit reference agency, and allow any individual to apply to protect their usual residential address from public inspection.
